WHAT SOCIETY PEOPLE ARE DOING THESE MUGGY DAYS.

A Few Midsummer Marriages—Arrivals and Departures at the Summer Resorts and Other Matters of Social Note.

The marriage of Miss Jessie McDermott, daughter of Mrs. J. B. McDermott, of Georgetown, to Hon. Charles Homer Walcott, of Boston, was solemnized in St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, Tuesday evening at 7:15 o'clock. The church was beautifully set with palms and foliage plants, and decorated with garlands of gay-hued flowers—the decorations being the work of members of the Children's League, of which Miss McDermott had been one of the most active members. The bride and groom entered the church together, accompanied by Mr. Charles McDermott, who gave his sister's hand in marriage. Miss McDermott's wedding costume was a traveling dress of navy blue camel's hair, made with Louis Court coat trimmed with silver braid and a toque of blue velvet adorned with silver lace. She carried a prayer book bound in blue and silver, from which the marriage service was read by the officiating clergyman, Rev. Dr. Regester. Mr. and Mrs. Walcott drove from the church to the railroad station and took the train for New York. They will reside at Concord, Mass., in an elegantly appointed house prepared by Mr. Walcott for his bride. Among the many friends witnessing the marriage ceremony were Mr. Henry Walcott, of Boston; Mrs. Charles Moritt and Master Mason Moritt, of Baltimore; the Misses Thomas, Mrs. Mayhew Plater, Mr. and Mrs. Poindexter, Mrs. and Miss Cowles, Miss Mollie Dodge, Mrs. Arthur Ferguson, Miss Wilcoxon, Miss K. E. Thomas, Mrs. Richard Pairo, Mrs. and Miss Addison, Mr. G. C. Thomas, Mrs. Cragin, Mr. W. R. Thomas, Mrs. James Elison, Mrs. Gill and Mr. Montgomery. The bride's mother, Mrs. J. B. McDermott, and her younger brother, Mr. Frank McDermott, were present at the ceremony. This quiet wedding in Georgetown will be a subject of interest wherever St. Nicholas and Wide Awake are read, as Miss Jessie McDermott's illustrations of subjects most dear to children's hearts have been among the best works of the above mentioned magazines.

Colonial Beach on the Potomac is having a gay season this summer. It is filled with pleasant people from this city. In addition to the large number of guests at the hotel and those who occupy cottages, there are many camping parties along the beach, adding considerably to the appearance of the place. "Camp Lurline" is about the most attractive, as it occupies a sort of bluff, and its white tents can be seen for fifteen miles up and down the river. Mr. W. H. Hagard is in charge of this camp and his pretty pleasure craft "Lurline" is the envy of the beachers. Among those with him are Mrs. Hagard, Captain and Mrs. J. E. Engle, Miss Nellie Engle, Miss Carrie Hagard, Willard and Freddie Hagard and Master Clarence and Norris Engle. At Camp Brady are Messrs. M. A. Martin and Harry Adams. At Gum Spring Camp are Messrs. D. C. Trotter, R. F. W. Morgan, H. B. Trotter, P. D. Connors and C. D. Trotter. At "Camp Helto, No. 9," are Mr. Oakes E. Caldwell, Ernest G. Drew, James M. and Louis E. Barnard. Among the latest arrivals are Mr. John T. Givens and family at their cottage, Mr. and Mrs. John Cumberland, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Johnson at their cottage, and Dr. Baldwin and family.

The first anniversary of the Osceola Club was celebrated Tuesday night by a banquet. During the course of the evening music was rendered by Messrs. Davey and Greenwell, and Mr. William Kendrick, of the U. S. Marine Band. Those present were: Mr. Frank Blumer and Misses Florence Burgess and Katie Herrmann, Mr. William Delano and Miss Myra Parsons, Mr. Clarence Cross and Miss Flora Heldges, Mr. Burch Earnshaw and Miss Julia Wilson, Mr. Charles Blumer and Miss Minnie Cook, Mr. William Kendrick and Miss Wilhelmina Hubalus, Mr. John Holmes, the Misses Annie and Ellie Cross and Lizzie Blumer, and Mrs. Cochran, Mrs. Blumer, Mrs. Cross and Mrs. Grinnan.

On Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in St. James' Episcopal Church, was celebrated the marriage of Miss Pearl Atwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Atwell, of this city, and Mr. Henry R. Bird, of the firm of Bird & West, of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Bird left immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to New York and the prominent watering places North.

Lansburgh's Employees Excursion.

The best evidence of the popularity of the excursion of Lansburgh & Brothers' employees is the fact that those who once attend one become regular patrons. The eighth annual excursion will be given on Wednesday, the 29th, to Marshall Hall, on the Macalester.

The management is in the hands of a committee of twenty-five, of which Mr. S. Hart is chairman. The arrangements have been placed in the hands of various sub-committees, who have carefully attended to all the details, and a large crowd and a pleasant time are assured.

The new pavilion at Marshall Hall, offering such excellent facilities for dancing, that feature will receive especial attention. A fine orchestra has been engaged and a choice dancing programme arranged. The floor management is in charge of Mr. W. G. Kelley, of the Mignone Club, who will be assisted by representatives of other well-known social clubs of this city.

The Plate Printers Enjoy Themselves.

The Plate Printers' Assembly Club gave a very pleasant excursion to Marshall Hall on Thursday evening. The affair was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. A quartette composed of Messrs. J. S. Smith, D. Fendall, Robert Lowry, and Will Brosnan rendered several fine selections on the boat. The Taylor Brothers' Quartette, composed of Messrs. B. E. Taylor, L. B. Taylor, C. F. Miller, and J. H. Cahill, accompanied by Mr. J. W. Garland, South Washington's blind organist, entertained the guests on the portico of the old Marshall Hall mansion. They justly received many encores from the several hundred guests who felt fully repaid for their evening's journey by the treat tendered them by the grand singing of this quartette.

Mrs. Ella Boyer rendered several very fine piano selections.

Pressmen on an Excursion.

The members of the Pressmen's Union gave a very enjoyable excursion on the steamer Charles Macalester to Marshall Hall on Wednesday evening. Mr. Stone, chairman of the committee in charge, with his able assistants, were indefatigable in their efforts to make their 500 guests enjoy the evening.

The quartette, of Baltimore, sang several fine selections. Mr. George D. Scott, of this city, and Mr. D. C. Priestley, of New York, made merriment for the party with their comic songs.

It Will Be a Big Excursion.

The six castles of the Knights of the Golden Eagle will give a united excursion to River View August 25, Tuesday, which will be one of the largest of the year, three steamers having been chartered to carry down the crowd. In the evening a dress parade will be given by the castles with military music. Boats will leave Washington and Georgetown to accommodate visitors from both places.

Free Attractions at Bay Ridge.

The All Brothers' exhibition of national sports, including gun exercise, boxing and gymnastic acts; Howe and Doyle in clog and wooden shoe dances; last week of Professor Burke and his dog circus; also music by U. S. Naval Academy Band; two theatrical performances daily; salt-water bathing, fishing and crabbing. Trains from B. and O. Station (week days) 9:15 a. m., 1:30 and 3:15 p. m., Sundays, 9:35 a. m., 1:30 and 3:15 p. m. Round trip, $1.

Passengers to Atlantic City

by special fast express from Baltimore and Ohio station at 4 p. m., Saturday, July 25, will not spend the night on the cars, but at the seashore. Special train will leave Atlantic City at 6 p. m., Sunday, but tickets will also be good on all regular trains returning Monday. Round trip, $3.50.

Go to the Bellevue Dairy, 1431 P street northwest, for bottled milk—kept in a refrigerator, "not foul water."

A PASSION FOR CHURCHES

little Bass or porter tends to facilitate matters a little now and then, taker, of course, only for medicinal purposes. We avoided hotels as much as possible for at least two reasons: Firstly, because they are a nuisance. One must tip the waiter, tip the porter, tip the luggage man, tip the chambermaid, tip the clerk, tip the bartender, tip the bell boy and all others either directly or remotely connected with the hotel. At least these people expect a fee, and unless you give it they have a way of making you feel decidedly uncomfortable. Then when one is feeling he is often some distance from the hotel at meal time and finds it inconvenient to go there to strengthen the inner-man. It's much pleasanter and more convenient to drop into the nearest coffee-house or restaurant for a lunch, where, usually, even in the cheaper eating-houses the fare is well served. The average visitor to Europe travels from hotel to hotel in the beaten route of tourists generally. To my way of thinking it is not the best way to see the country. Go into the by-ways and hedges, go slumming, take tramps across the country and see the people, their habits and customs as they exist. What idea of the real life of a country can one obtain by going from city to city, stopping at popular hotels, where one meets mainly other travelers who are as ignorant on local subjects as ourselves? Dress comfortably, and with a fellow-traveler, if it can be arranged, go out of the beaten track of the ordinary tourist, stop at country houses, talk with the natives, eat with them and for the time be one of them. This is the way to travel if you wish to obtain a correct notion of a country and its people, their daily life, habits and customs. One reason, too, for avoiding hotels was because they interfered with some of the objects of our trip. Another reason—and a potent one—is this: It is cheaper. We have to economize now and then, Smith and I do, and so if in the future we seem a little eccentric in our movements, if we don't mention our champagne suppers, our long stays at fashionable hotels and expensive watering-places, and if we don't speak of the class of our railroad tickets I trust you will save us another painful explanation by not asking us why we have not mentioned these things. I know some people whose hearts it would break to confess that they were poor, who skimp and go half clad and half fed at home in order to make some people in public believe they are men and women of large resources. Don't do it. It's not so bad to be poor. I rather like it. No, we haven't extensive bank accounts, but our capacity for enjoyment is unlimited. We both, as yet, have vigorous digestions and each a well-trained conscience. We therefore sleep well. We do not wonder if this bank or that bank will fail. But I digress. I turn back a few pages and find we have not yet left the cathedral. At this point, not having anything more to say, I consult my diary and find the following notes, which were evidently intended as mere points for some future letter. I will not expand them, however. The notes relate to our visit to the cathedral as follows: "Went to cathedral (look up history); Gothic style (read up on architecture, write something on the evolution of the Gothic style); saw crypt in which Rob Roy took shelter (look up the story of R. R.); be certain about the author; draw a scene here; have R. R. and his band of desperadoes, if they were desperadoes, fight like hyenas; find out how hyenas fight; compare them to something else if hyenas don't; find out how to spell 'hyenas'; if R. R. is some saint find out what kind and why he was there; make it pathetic; make him have long flowing hair and great hollow eyes; portray the religious feeling of the time; saw the well of St. Someone; (find out who this saint was and why he had a well here; if the history is obscure, don't hesitate to be liberal with the imagination; might work up a comparison to Rebecca—be sure it was Rebecca—and her well; read a little biblical history on Rebecca—if found it is Rebecca, and if there is any similarity, end by saying 'true it is that history only repeats itself'; the guide said it was a groined roof (find out what 'groined' means, also 'reereds,' 'nave,' and several other words that the guide used—learn how to spell them correctly); beautiful windows (here write something about the process of making window glass—give a description of the effect these windows have on the light; work off 'the weird play of multi-colors as they chase each other up and down the gloomy aisles'); visited the old graveyard around the cathedral (work up something pathetic here, better have it moonlight; see that the date of the letter corresponds to a time when the moon does shine—represent the writer as standing alone amidst 'the silent sentinels of the dead'—be sure and use this expression: While the soft mellow moonshine flooded with an uncertain light the 'Silent City of the Dead'—incorporate this expression in an appropriate place—don't use it too near the other as they sound too much alike—might have the 'distant rumble of the busy city' faintly audible—draw the scene and then have the writer soliloquize. Here is a chance for fine work.")

And so my notes run on, but time and the editor of St. Nicholas will not permit me to expand them as I intended in the suggestions following each item.

We are now going to leave the cathedral. We have left, and are now on our way to the nearest restaurant. By the aid of a strong will and an increasing appetite Smith was enabled to tear himself away from the old church. We had not tasted food for two hours—a long time between meals for a few days after a sea voyage of twelve days' duration—and we were well nigh exhausted from hunger. We reach an eating-house, and it is a real pleasure to see Smith come back to earth again and diminish that restaurant's stock of meat pies. My diary again: "Went to room about 7:30 p. m.; cold; a damp, misty night—typical Scotch weather; unpleasant in room; lighted the tallow candle, wrapped my feet in a blanket, and wrote letters. Then wrote my diary for the day; retired about 10:30 p. m. July 1—Arose at 8 a. m., had breakfast, and at 9:15 took train for Stirling—fare 2s. 6d. At Stirling 10:30; went to castle; fine view from battlement. Stirling Castle is built on an immense rock rising abruptly from a level plain, and has figured conspicuously in the numerous conflicts in early Scotch history. It has always been considered a key to the north country. It is now a barrack, and the 'red coats' may be seen at any hour of the day passing along the winding walks and drives in and around the old fortress. Stirling is a small place, and outside the castle it contains nothing of special interest. After lunch we took the train for Edinburgh at 12:53 p. m., arriving at 3:30—fare 3s." The fare I quote is third class. You know in Europe they say that only "fools and Americans travel first class," which is perhaps exaggerated, but nevertheless suggestive. There is but little difference in the comfort of first and third class in England, and the distances being short it is nonsense to travel first class unless, of course, money is no object. We traveled third class in Britain and second class on the Continent and found it usually very comfortable.
